

This example was shown by Moore et al. (2012) to show how to conduct a paired sample t-test. The data illustrate an observation of patients during full moon days or normal days and compute the rate of antisocial behavior during those days. If Full moon does not affect behavior, then the rates should be the same across the observations.